Nicely Printed Books of Splendid Institutions.

Associate Reformed Presbyterian. The catalogue of Erskine College is unusual y interesting because it is the decennial saue. Quite a number of beautiful pictures are presented which give a good idea of the College buildings and make a fine showing. All needed information about the course of study and the charges can be found in its pages as well as the register of students. It was printed in the Presbyterian office and is a good tob.

The Due West Female College Catalogue The Due West Female College Catalogue gives a splendid idea of the working of that institution and makes an admirable showing for the school. Typographically it is a gem. The beautiful new type, the arrangement of the matter, the printing, all make it a credit to the publisher, Mr. Hugh Wilson, of Abbe ville. It cannot be surpassed in this section. These catalogues should be widely distributed and may be obtained from the Presidents. If our receiver will take the trouble dents. dents. Doubtless there are none to deny, that all would be exceedingly glad for the heated term to come to an end, not sione that they might be relieved of the suffering caused by the heat, but it is believed and hoped that milder weather would give to them fewer electrical and wind storms, which according to the newspapers have been so destructive to life and property.
Mrs. W. W. White who has been here for the few weeks, and Mrs. R. Y. Hallams and her three children, who have been here for more than a week, left for their Greenville home on Saturday last.
Some much needed rains have fallen in different places around during the past week. There has not been anything like a general rain, and nothing less will fill demands.
Fruits with us to date, have falled to be what might be called good. The earlier fruits rotted because of two much rain and the later ones are generally hard and knotty.

GOOD ROADS A NECESSITY.

Some Sensible Remarks About Mr. Meschine's Letter to McLauriu. Prof. Gilliam, Principal, and Miss

We have no figures to give, but we are impressed that the immense loss now entailed upon our farmers by the miserable roads which they have to travel could be cut in half or even further reduced by an expenditure of say a hundred thousand dollars in road making. The county could float bonds to that amount at par on a four per cent basis, now while money is cheap. No better time could be had for such a reform than the present and we will never be a prosperous and wealthy prople until we spend this money. County officials who have no progressive ideas, should be retired from office. Those who are willing to get on the band wagon and lead the procession of progress should be relead the procession of progress should be re-tained. But people and office holders alike should start at once to make the county an uptodate, progressive, money making and money saving county. Old methods have be-come ridiculous. They must give place to come ridiculous. They must give place to the new.

There is nothing on the face of the early less agressive and progressive than county government as it is administered in South Carolina. But the people will not put up with it indefinitely. We must get rid of our bad roads, a relic of a half savage state: otherwise we will never keep up with the material progress of other states and countres. Anderson and Pickens have already had their roads surveyed and worked with road, machines. Greenwood and Abbeville have done something in the same line. Richland and Darlington are setting an example of making good roads by mixing sand and elay. Laurens has done nothing, nothing, nothing.

CORRESPONDENCE.

July 13th, 1901.

Hon. J. L. McLaurin, Senator,
Dear sir: I have read in the Press and Banner of 10th inst., the speech you delivered at Spartanburg on the 4th of July. on the masterly manner you are dealing with the important questions which confront us at present. But, as for the following sen-

the important questions which confront us at present. But, as for the following sentence,
"Paris, although numerically great, has no power as a commercial city of the world, but contents itself with leading only in fashion and scandal."

I cannot approve of the rather revere judgment you pronounced upon this spiendid city.
Such an utterance falling from the lips of a United States Senator cannot fail to surprise those who know Paris well, and romewhat to hurt the feelings of many South Carolinians whose ancestors if not themselves came from Paris.

To Senator McLaurin, better informed or less prejudiced, with her three millions people, Parish would appear if not first commercially, certainly second to no other city of the world as a leading center of learning, intelligence, chivalry, hospitality, uprightness and behaviour.

Meschine.

Mr. McLaurin's Answer.

Bennettsville, S. C., July 16th, 1901.

Dear air: Your jetter of congratulation up-

Mr. E. C. Meschine, Lowndesville, S. C., Dear sir; Your letter of congratulation upon my Spartanburg speech is received, and I beg to express my high appreciation of it.

What I said about Paris may be unjust, but What I said about Paris may be unjust, but I am isboring under slight prejudice against the city on account of the Drayios case, and atlowed this perhaps to effect my judgment of the city. I have no doubt that it is second to no other city in learning, intelligence, hospitality, and chivsiry, but it might with all these advantages be second to many others as a commercial city. I knew very little about Paris and hereafter will be more charitable.

Yours very truly,

Jno, L. McLaurin.

Is One Church as Good as Another

Rev. M. W. Gordan preached an usually interesting sermon at the Baptist church last Sunday morning. The subject of Lis discourse being, "Why have a Baptist Church in Abbeville?" or "What a Baptist Church Stands For." He said, in part, that no religious denomination has a moral right to separate existence unless it differs essentially from others. If one church was as good as another, why not all unite and have in Abbeville but one church was as good as another, why not all unite and have in Abbeville but one church was liding and one preacher. But that could not be because the different churches held to different doctrines. The Baptists atand for the New Testament as the sufficient rule of faith and practice, while many other churches founded their beliefs or oreeds, catechisms and the theories of men. Haptists also stand for a regenerated church membership. The New Testament idea of a church is a local assemblage of baptized believers. There was no authority in the Bible for "join the church, then get religion." And the Baptists stand for believer's baptism. Then they that gladly received the word were baptized, and the same day there were added unto them (that is the church) about three thousand souls. Acts 2:41. While some other churches claim baptism to be a saving ordinance the Baptists do not, but simply claim that it is an "answer of good conscience," to be administered only to those who have been converted. Baptists stand for immersion in water as the only scriptual baptism. It symbolizes the burial and resurection of Christ, and the Greek word Be stizo, admits of no other meaning. Baptists alone stand for the Lord's Supper as a church ordinance. Baptists stand for New Testament church government. "A go-ernment of God by the people for the people for the people for the epople."

Mr. Gordan delivered the discourse with much vim and power and kept the entire attention of his audience through the entire attention of his audience through the entire attention of his audience through the entire attention of h

Inequalities in Salaries.

The qualities in Galaries.

This thing of inequalities in salaries is one which has been a sore in the eyes of a great many; and has made a greater number sick at heart. I think it is time to stop the discussion on this subject through the press; and let those who are so much disratisfied, make themselves worthy of better salaries, and then they will get them.

It is passing strange that there are those who desire to place themselves, or to be placed, where they are not fitted to be; yet judging from their words and actions there are those who desire to be placed in just such circumstances as these.

I think from what observation I have had in the past, I can say without fear of successful contradiction; that make they deserve in this world. There may be, of course, exceptions to this rule, but it is only the exception, not the rule, when this is not true.

true.

Therefore, if all would apply themselves, and do the work assigned them, and do it well, and at the same seek to improve themselves, and study to make themselves profitable workmen, their work would soon be observed, and their services sought after by those who would pay them a satisfactory salary.
